Principal's Message

Dear Lakeview parents:

Spring Break is here! Here's hoping that you and your family enjoy the break. When we get back from break, we begin our sprint to the end of the year. This is an exciting and challenging time for all of our students. And we are asking for your help in getting them through successfully.

The week we get back to school is the beginning of state testing. Here is how you can help us:

- Read the enclosed testing schedule so you can help your students get to where they need to be.
- Please encourage your students to take all of their tests seriously. Our school can only learn what we need to improve if students are doing their best work on the tests.
- Ensure your students get enough rest and eat well in the days prior to testing.
- Make sure your students are on time to school on testing days.
- Make sure your students attend every day they are required to attend. Attendance matters to our funding, so it's important that every student be here when they need to be.

Thank you for your help with this!

The end of the year is particularly rewarding and challenging for our seniors. If you are the parent of a senior, here is how you can help you them:

- Read closely all communications that come to you about graduation and awards ceremonies.
- Keep up on your senior's grades. If they are at risk of losing credit, be in touch with their teachers about that.
- Keep your eyes open for signs of anxiety or depression. There is a lot of stress on seniors. If you have any concerns, please contact their counselor.
- Check your senior's Skyward account for the amount of money they owe for fees and fines. These accounts need to be paid prior to graduation.

Thank you all for your support of your students and of us in our work with them. Together we can make sure our Spartans grow into the best possible young adults. Our world is depending on them, and we who work with them every day are depending on you.

Your partner in supporting your students,

Jeff

JUULing 101: Parents, it's time to go to school

Is your child JUULing? Would you even know a JUUL if you saw one? As e-cigarettes and vapes help adults quit the tobacco habit, the JUUL is booming in popularity among teenagers. Why?

For starters, teenagers like that it can be hidden in plain sight. It looks like a flash drive and charges by USB. There are several kinds of vapes that look like the JUUL, but this brand alone accounts for half of the e-cigarette market. In 2016, the company saw a 700 percent increase in sales, more than $322 million. It is marketed as an adult alternative to cigarettes. Yet, do you know an adult who JUULs? And yet, teens now use it as a verb.

With JUULs, it's a five-minute buzz – your eyes aren't red, your speech isn't slurred, it doesn't smell bad. "Students are seeing how easy it is to use JUULs, they think, 'If I can get away with a JUUL, who's to say I can't get away with using a dab pen, and liquid THC, a prolonged high.' The JUUL is a gateway to people thinking they can get away with more.

Just this month, the US Army warned about the dangers of synthetic marijuana vaping oils after dozens of soldiers were hospitalized. We don't know all of the ingredients in a JUUL, or what the health effects of inhaling the vapors are because it isn't regulated by the government yet. We do know, the nicotine in one JUUL pod is the equivalent of a pack of cigarettes. The kids have a name for the quick, sometimes too powerful buzz: nic sick.

There is no doubt that teenagers are the target of this product. "These are slim devices, you plug in, it lights up. It comes in different flavors a teenager would like. It's being geared to our kids." The Food and Drug Administration did make it illegal to sell vapes and e-cigarettes to kids under 18, but it also moved a compliance deadline for new products from 2018 to 2022 to foster "innovation" for "forms of nicotine delivery" that are potentially "less harmful" than cigarettes.
